

Canadian Indigenous Languages and Literacy Development Institute (CILLDI)

Information for the 2016 Summer Program, July 4-22 2016 in Edmonton, AB.

Who are we?

CILLDI is devoted to Indigenous Language Revitalization. Language educators and activists attend CILLDI to take classes in Education, Native Studies, and Linguistics, three disciplines working together to create a strong interdisciplinary program at the University of Alberta. Fully supported by a compliment of both Indigenous and non-Indigenous instructors and Elders, students from across Canada learn about the structure of languages, curriculum development, immersion strategies, language activism, and digitizing, providing essential professional development tools.

What classes are being offered in July 2016?

There are a wide variety of classes this year! As we develop new course material it will be added to this list, so keep an eye on CILLDI's website, facebook, and twitter for updates. Students can take two classes every summer, from any of the programs listed or a combination of them. Please contact the CILLDI office at cilldi@ualberta.ca for more information.
